

THE WOUND

I climbed to the crest,

And, fog-festooned,

The sun lay west

Like a crimson wound:

Like that wound of mine

Of which none knew,

For I'd given no sign

That it pierced me through.